War between Greece and Turkey is seemingly inevitable. How far the fever of battle will spread among the "great powers" of Europe can only be conjectured. The two quarrelling nations, being independent powers, have a right to fight out their issue while the rest of Europe looks on. But all Europe is selfish, seeking aggrandizement. If Greece is to begin the dismemberment of the

"'No,' I replied with some asperity, 'I tors so that that gentleman landed with some asperity, 'I don't mean up at the hotel; there are no bugs at the hotel. What I intended to make why Oi was iver the flies or bugs are about this morning?

"'No,' he answered, 'why, what's that got to do with fishing? "That's exactly the point,' I said. Take your black bass or your trout, or any of the fish that rise to flies, and they why don't ye answer me? Hev ye no spirit at all, at "Did yor marked Bill Barnacle."

"All these here flub dub and red fire know what sort of flies are out to-day, or any other day, and that is the food they are after. Now, as we came out I noticed any number of the spirit at all, at "Did yor marked Bill Barnacle." any number of these yellow butterfiles about. That means that this is yellow

"'Rising to flies is confined entirely,' I said, 'to the fish aristocrats. A black bass is peculiarly susceptible to files. Thus you see that by confining yourself to flies you confine yourself to bass-or, if you are on a trout stream, to trout.

"Being yellow fly day, when we arrived at the river I tied on a saffron-colored insect and then showed my scholar how to cast it. He made one or two pretty good bluffs. About the third cast, just as the yellow bait floated down into the water, some animal suddenly lifted its head above the surface and grabbed it. Whatever it was, it then settled solemnly back into the mud on its haunches and never moved. In the first gust of amazement my scholar did not make the slightest effort to bring in

A SPOONFUL OF THE TUNEFUL.

Now the rumpty tumpty tootle's On the rumpty tumpty toot, And the scooting Billy scootles For the bottle and the boot;

Oh, the blue jay's blithely seething With the squawk that makes him giad, And the hawker's madly breathing Through his Triton trumpet "Shad!"

With the vine that climbs the lath: With a flagon on his caudle. How the bow-wow filts in wrath; And I see the farmer, wistful

Oh. I see the zephyr dawdle

As the frisky Klekapoo, Tossing popcorn by the fistful To the cockadoodledoo. Oh, I seent the balmy borax

Where the whitewash gayly buds, And I get it in the thorax When I tumble in the suds: Oh, the cake of soap is flying Like the bat beneath the moon; Oh, the squab is softly sighing,

Now I dream of the flamingo When I see the rooster wing, And I hear the dingalingo Of his dingalingaling. For the cow is the engulpher Of the myrtle in the mud, While I take the golden sulphur

And molasses for my blood.

And the fishball is in tune.

Oh, the very air is tuneful-It is like a fairy dream. And a prescience of the spoonful Of the berries and the cream! Which in springtime fondly dimpling All my visions makes me soar Where the pancakes cease from pimpling And the sausage barks no m
